Did You Know? Summer Salary can be paid as additional pay, through a concurrent job or as a primary job depending on different factors.

- Summer Salary can be paid as additional pay if it is for job-related activities performed during off-duty periods, such as summer or vacation.
  - For Senate faculty, this includes teaching, research and service
  - For non-senate appointees, the location must determine if the summer activity is job-related

- A concurrent job is needed:
    - If the funding source requires effort be tracked
    - For non-instructional appointees and Unix IX Lecturers teaching in Summer Session
- A new primary job is required if the summer appointment is the only job
- Reference the Summer Salary Processing job aid for more details
